Practice Summary

Russell Bradley was admitted as a Scottish advocate on 1st June 2012. Prior to that, he was in private practice as a solicitor for over 20 years. In the latter 10 years, he worked exclusively in the employment field as partner and head of the Scottish employment team with the global law firm DLA Piper. His work covered the whole gamut of employment issues. He was accredited as a specialist in employment law by the Law Society of Scotland and has retained that exclusive focus on employment work in his years since coming to the Scottish Bar.

In the 4-year period from November 2020 he was a fee-paid employment judge in Scotland. He returns to practice in November 2024 resuming his rights to appear in the Scottish ET and EAT.

His practice is primarily first instance in the employment tribunal where he is regularly and frequently instructed across the UK by many well-known brand names in the retail, finance, facilities and transport industries.

His Scottish covenant work involves advising both employers and employees on their enforceability and appearing when they are litigated, for interim and final remedies.
